AMERICAN COLLEGE SPORT

American college sports is a multi-billion-dollar industry, with teams often boasting higher TV ratings and larger game-day crowds than top-tier professional leagues, while generating comparable or even greater revenue.

Almost every household in America will support one college team or another which, in turn, makes the college game very a colossal business, with billions generated through TV deals, merchandise and ticket sales.

Some of the highest profile athletes in the world attained scholarships at an American university in the early stages of their careers, with the roll call of alumni including Michael Jordan (University of North Carolina), Tiger Woods (Stanford University), Caitlin Clark (University of Iowa) and Megan Rapinoe (University of Portland). Indeed the recent Paris Olympics was dominated by current or former athletes, with 127 gold medals, 95 silver and 108 bronze medals landed by NCAA stars, including swimmer Leon Marchand (France and Arizona State University) and sprinter Gabby Thomas (USA and Harvard University).

Only the country's elite athletes will be given the opportunity to play top level college sport, alongside those recruited internationally, with scholarship athletes being highly regarded throughout the US.

Highlighting the scale of US college sport, check out some of these stats!

- The average attendance at a University of Michigan football game is 109,971
- Nike's kit deal with UCLA is worth $7.7m per year - $46.5million in total
- Ohio State University's athletic department generates an annual income of $251 million
- If the University of South Carolina was a country, it would be ranked the 3rd in All-Time Olympic medal table based on medals won by their student-athletes
- The top five college football coaches in the US all earn in excess of $10m a year, with the highest salary being awarded to Kirby Smart from the University of Georgia
- The University of Alabama recently invested $40m in their college golf facilities, designed by Ryder Cup star and alum Justin Thomas
- Louisiana State University gymnast Olivia Dunne earned $4m in NIL sponsorships and endorsements, thanks to her 13.6m social media followers
- According to The Times World University Rankings* 7 out of the top-10 ranked universities in the world are in the United States – Stanford, MIT, Harvard, Princeton, Caltech, Cal Berkeley and Yale.

LIFE AS A COLLEGE ATHLETE

College athletes enjoy the best of both worlds: the opportunity to train and compete like professionals while also pursuing a higher education degree. While this dual commitment can be challenging and demanding, the potential rewards, both athletic and academic, make it worthwhile.

Campuses across the country vary in size and you could be one of 30,000 students at a university, but one of the select few elite athletes awarded a scholarship, with special attention afforded to you as a representative of one of the university's heralded sports teams.

The options of what to study are numerous, as are the choice of sports, and you could be aiming for a degree in business, engineering or sports science, while running out for the soccer, rugby or track and field team. The average athletic department houses all sports on campus and employs around 1,000 full-time staff who look after the needs of the athletes, both on and off the field.

As an athlete, you will be training double/triple sessions for 6 days per week. At times, you may be competing for your university at least twice per week, with half of your games or events taking place away from home. America is a large country, therefore flying 6-7 hours for a game is not unusual and you would find that 2-3 consecutive away games is the equivalent of 7-14 days of being away from campus. During this time, you'll be expected to keep on top of your academics and maintain good grades.

Top-performing college athletes will be household names in the States, competing in Olympic games and representing their country and there will be demands on you to perform at an elite level, while maintaining your academic work and study commitments. Hard work? Yes. Challenging? Yes. Rewarding on and off the field? Most certainly!

SCHOLARSHIPS: HOW THEY WORK

According to figures from the NCAA, more than 180,000 student-athletes receive around $3.6 billion in athletic scholarships in Divisions I and II each year, with the average athletic scholarship being worth $18,000 per student-athlete.

There are two types of sports scholarship that you can receive from a US college or university. One is called a 'full scholarship' and the other is a 'partial scholarship.' Every athlete wants a full scholarship. This is because it covers most of the costs involved with attending university in America. A full scholarship will mean that the university is paying for all your tuition, accommodation, food, books and everything related to your sport. As an example, a full scholarship at Stanford is worth approximately $400,000 for one athlete.

A partial scholarship is just as it sounds, it is where the university are offering you a deal that will cover some, but not all, of the costs associated with attending the university. If, for example, a university costs $50,000 and the coach is giving you a scholarship worth $35,000, then this is a partial scholarship as there is a $15,000 shortfall that you will be required to contribute towards the costs of attending the university.

Most partial scholarships come with the incentive that if you perform well, both on the field and in the classroom, then the coach can reward you with a scholarship increase, thus reducing the overall financial contribution required from you and your family. There are also other scholarships that a university can offer (academic scholarships, for example) and these can be combined with a sports scholarship to cover the costs associated with attending a university.

Full Scholarship

Covers most of the costs involved with attending university in America.

- Tuition
- Accommodation
- Food
- Books
- Sporting expenses

Partial Scholarship

Covers some, but not all of the costs involved with attending university in America

Example Costs:

Cost of Programme: $50,000

Scholarship award: $35,000

Student contribution: $15,000

The current average annual contribution of a FirstPoint USA student-athlete is £12,000. As a comparison, the annual cost of university tuition in England is £9,000, which doesn't cover additional costs such as accommodation.

This is an average figure - your contribution may be lower or higher dependent on the level of scholarship awarded.*

ALUMNI SUCCESS

Liam Doyle: From Junior College to NCAA D1 to the MLS

Originally from the Isle of Man, Liam Doyle impressed FirstPoint USA's coaching team at a college ID assessment trial in his hometown, successfully securing a place on the soccer program and eyeing his dream move to the States.

He landed an initial scholarship with Cincinnati State Technical and Community College, a junior college in the NJCAA and played there for two years scoring 19 goals in 38 games, before attracting the attention of some top NCAA D1 programs and signing a transfer to Ohio State University, one of the top ranked sides in the nation.

Liam enjoyed two great seasons with the Buck Eyes and made the MLS Super Draft, before playing professionally in the States with a number of USL sides, including LA Galaxy. He has continued his career in the States within the soccer industry and is now Director of Soccer Operations at MLS club Nashville.

Danny Willett: College Golfer to Masters Champion

Danny Willett, one of our most celebrated alumni on the global stage, joined us as a promising young golfer in the England U18s squad. His talent quickly flourished, earning him a scholarship to Jacksonville State University in Alabama. There, he was named Freshman of the Year in the Ohio Valley Conference and ascended to the top of the World Amateur Golf Rankings. As a collegiate golfer, he represented GB&I in the 2007 Walker Cup before turning professional in 2008.

When Danny wins, he tends to win big and his maiden pro victory came at the 2012 BMW International Open, followed by triumphs in the Omega European Masters and the Dubai Desert Classic before landing his first Major with a sensational win at the 2016 Masters in Augusta.

He represented Team Europe in the Ryder Cup later that season, and has since gone on to claim multiple tour victories, including the Dunhill Links Championship and BMW PGA Championship at Wentworth.

THE FIRSTPOINT USA SERVICE

Our Network

FirstPoint USA work with over 2,500 American colleges & universities covering all 50 US states and across the different levels, from NCAA DI to NAIA and NJCAA. We have worked with these colleges for the past 20+ years and have developed strong relationships with thousands of coaches in different sports along the way.

Your Options

There are two options for you to consider when deciding how best to secure a sports scholarship to an American university.

The first option would be for you to pursue the opportunity on your own. This is not always easy, but it is certainly possible. The main benefit of pursuing the scholarship process by yourself is that it is completely free to do so, albeit it will involve a lot of your own work, research, phone / video calls, while it may be difficult to make connections with the right coaches. And we can help you do this through creating a Free Profile on our platform at firstpointusa.com

Your second option is to utilize FirstPoint USA's specialized sports scholarship and university admissions service. By paying a fee for either of our comprehensive packages, you can entrust us to manage the entire process, supporting you from the initial stages, all the way through to graduation.

Guarantees & Our Success

FirstPoint USA provides a guarantee to each client that every effort will be made to provide them with opportunities to attend a college or university that best fits their academic, athletic, financial and social needs – and we are committed to each client until this has been achieved.

However, it is prohibited under both NCAA regulations (12.3.3.1 Talent Evaluation Services & Agents) and British Consumer Law for either FirstPoint USA – or any sports scholarship agency – to provide promises, guarantees or assurances regarding specific scholarship offers to any US college or university.

Scholarships are awarded by the universities themselves, therefore scholarship offers cannot be guaranteed as a condition of working with us. However, we are very thorough when assessing our athletes to ensure they meet the academic, athletic and eligibility requirements to obtain a scholarship in the US, and every client we have worked with has received an offer from a university or college.

OUR SERVICE PACKAGE OPTIONS

Prospective student-athletes and their families can choose from our two different service package options, designed to suit your budget and varying requirements. Select from Professional or Elite, with each package delivering a comprehensive range of service benefits.

ADDITIONAL COSTS TO CONSIDER

Athletes and families should also consider the list of additional costs that are likely to be incurred when embarking on your US college journey, including elements such as flights and health insurance, and allow for these within your budget planning.

Flights to the USA -
$600 - $1200* (per year)

SAT Test - $111 (one-off)

Student Visa - $500 (one-off)

Eligibility Centre - $150 (one-off)

Living Costs (shopping, eating out, etc) - $TBC

TOEFL (for athletes who have English as a second language) -
$235 (one-off)

*The cost of flights will vary dependent on date, location and airline.

HEALTH INSURANCE

As a student-athlete, all aspects of medical support are covered by the Athletic Department and its team of doctors, surgeons and physios. However, it is always recommended to have an additional policy to cover any occasion when you are not around the campus or with the team. Health cover can often be included within an athletes' scholarship package, however if it is not, then there are plenty of options available. An additional health insurance policy can be obtained for an annual cost of approximately $1,000 per year.

STUDYING IN THE US vs. STUDYING IN THE UK

The current average contribution of a FirstPoint USA student-athlete is £12,000, when taking into consideration the average scholarship awarded and the overall cost of attending college or university in the US.

As a comparison, the average cost of university tuition in England is £9,250, which notably doesn't cover significant additional costs such as accommodation. All in, you could be expected to pay around £22,000 per annum when attending an English university. For international students, the tuition fees alone range from £11,000 to £38,000.

When it comes to playing sport at college or university, the benefits of studying in the US significantly outweigh what is available to you in the UK. You'll have access to some of the best sports facilities in the world, the opportunity to compete in front of large crowds, perform regularly at a high level, train full-time with some of the best coaches in the country and enjoy the type of support normally reserved for professional athletes.

SUPPORTING STUDENT ATHLETES WITH THE ADMISSIONS PROCESS

FirstPoint USA's comprehensive service is designed to guide prospective student-athletes and their families through each stage of the admissions process. Our experienced team offers support with the following elements:

- Understanding the benefits of a coach 'assisted admission'.
- Navigating the Common Application process, including an overview of deadlines, types of applications (such as Early Decision, Early Action Regular Decision), and required materials (including letters of recommendation).
- Providing insights into the Early Decision process, including its benefits, obligations, and how it impacts overall admission strategy and acceptance rates.
- Providing detailed guidance on crafting admissions essays and answering institution-specific questions, whether applying via the Common App or directly to a university.
- Offering insights into the admissions process for direct applications to universities.
- Conducting thorough application reviews before submission.
- General advice on the Financial Aid process (including use of the CSS profile) and associated deadlines.

This process can be time-consuming and daunting in some cases, but our expertise in these areas is designed to make it smoother, easier and more efficient for you.

SOURCES OF FINANCIAL AID AND FUNDING FOR INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS

In addition to the opportunity to secure an athletic or academic scholarship, there are other financial support options available to assist your education in the US. One of the primary functions of our service is to find you the best level of scholarship available, and this is based on the following factors:

- Official school qualifications and grades
- Admissions exam results
- Sporting ability and achievement

Thereafter, prospective student-athletes should also consider the options summarised below.

1. Funding from the University

Your best resource for funding will be the university to which you are applying. Many universities offer significant funding to international students, including needs-based financial aid.

Your financial need is calculated by subtracting the amount your family is able to contribute towards your education from a university's published cost of attendance. If you can pay the full cost of attendance, you will receive no financial aid.

Dozens of universities will fund the full demonstrated financial need of admitted international students. However, many of these will factor an applicant's financial circumstances into their admissions decision. This is known as need-aware admissions. If you have high financial need and are a need-aware university's most desirable applicant, it is possible your full financial need will be met.

Some universities are need-blind and do not base your admissions decision on your financial circumstances.

2. External Funding Bodies

There are hundreds of funding bodies helping international students attend university in the USA. They include trusts, charities and private donors committed to a particular educational mission. Like scholarships, external funding bodies often have specific qualities they are looking for in applicants, such as gender, country of origin, ethnicity and interests.

3. Loans

Some US colleges will loan money directly to international students. You should contact each university's financial aid office to find out the usual loan arrangements for international students if a loan is necessary for you to undertake your studies.

4. Working on Campus

Students can earn additional income by working on campus, up to a maximum of 20 hours a week during term time and up to 40 hours a week during the holidays. And after your first year, you could apply to be part of the student residence team and receive free on-campus housing and meals in exchange for helping to manage a residence hall. Our website has links to help you access resources and information of applying for funding from external bodies.

5. Name, Image & Likeness (NIL)

Student-athletes can now earn income through Name, Image & Likeness, with brands now paying for sponsorships and endorsements, social media posts, player appearances, coaching and merchandise. There are some restrictions for international students earning NIL income but there is a growing opportunity for athletes in this marketplace to generate income and contribute to your living expenses.

PARTNERSHIPS

FirstPoint USA is proud to have forged partnerships with many leading clubs, sports organisations, national governing bodies, academies and schools, through sponsorship, athlete support and provision of our services. We work closely with our partners to deliver guidance on the player pathway and transition, ensuring athletes receive expert advice and insights from our own team of former student-athletes.

We also work with respected brands who add value to our own service package, including SW7 Academy and their strength and conditioning app, Football Careers who support graduates looking for future roles in the sports sector, and Jabil, opening up unique intern and graduate employment opportunities across their global manufacturing business.

NAME, IMAGE, LIKENESS

Olivia Dunne
13.6m social media followers

Historically, within NCAA-governed collegiate athletics, student-athletes have been restricted in their ability to make money during their tenure at their chosen institution. More specifically, NCAA athletes have been prohibited from profiting off their name, image and likeness in the same way that their professional counterparts have. Until recently, when legislation changes created a huge opportunity for student-athletes.

What is NIL?

Quite simply, an athlete's "Name, Image and Likeness" are the three key components that make up an individual's legal "right of publicity" in the US. This covers anything from their face appearing on an advert or social media post, an avatar representing them in computer-generated form within a video game or even something as simple as their name appearing on an item of clothing.

NIL legislation has moved the goalposts and given the green light for individuals to monetize their NIL rights in line with state laws, school and conference requirements which all have their own additional policies in place to adhere to.

Businesses across America are now investing millions of dollars in student-athlete and college team endorsements, with many universities now employing NIL specialists to help their students maximize the opportunity. From sports apparel to restaurants, car manufacturers to soft drinks, brands are throwing significant money behind college athletes, targeting those who have a large social media following and engaging content creation.

"The NIL landscape represents a transformative shift in the intersection of college sports and marketing. With the growing influence of digital platforms, student-athletes are becoming central figures in brand promotion, leveraging their online presence to engage with audiences who are more glued to their phones than ever before." Forbes Magazine

NIL has been a game-changer for elite level college athletes, and in 2023 the top five earners brought in more than $2m of NIL income. Leading the way is University of Colorado quarterback Shedeur Sanders, whose NIL valuation is an incredible $5.1m, while Louisiana State University gymnast Livvy Dunne generated an estimated $4m NIL income through her portfolio of endorsement deals.

By developing your own personal brand, ensuring your social media presence has a professional look and embracing content creation, the sky is the limit for your NIL earning potential.

NO ONE DOES STUDENT RECRUITMENT BETTER THAN US

FirstPoint USA was created by Andrew Kean, a former All-American student-athlete at the University of Cincinnati, where he now proudly features within the Bearcat's prestigious Hall of Fame alongside some sporting icons like NFL Super Bowl winner Brad Jackson, NBA MVP Oscar Robertson and Olympic Gold Medallist Mary Wineberg.

Having experienced the life-changing opportunities provided to student-athletes firsthand, Andrew made the decision in 2001 to dedicate the rest of his life to opening those same doors for future generations, and so, FirstPoint USA was born.
